When plans change

Read the extract. Discuss the questions with a partner and use details from the text.

The situation: Fiona has just received her Assignment. Jonas expects his turn next. He belongs to the Elevens and is about to become a Twelve. Nineteen is his birth and ceremony number, not his age.

LOIS LOWRY, THE GIVER | CHAPTER 7, PRINTED PAGE 57

Jonas prepared himself to walk to the stage when the applause ended and the Chief Elder picked up the next folder and looked down to the group to call forward the next new Twelve. He was calm now that his turn had come. He took a deep breath and smoothed his hair with his hand.

"Twenty," he heard her voice say clearly. "Pierre." She skipped me, Jonas thought, stunned. Had he heard wrong? No. There was a sudden hush in the crowd, and he knew that the entire community realized that the Chief Elder had moved from Eighteen to Twenty, leaving a gap. On his right, Pierre, with a startled look, rose from his seat and moved to the stage.

A mistake. She made a mistake. But Jonas knew, even as he had the thought, that she hadn't. The Chief Elder made no mistakes. Not at the Ceremony of Twelve.

He felt dizzy, and couldn't focus his attention. He didn't hear what Assignment Pierre received, and was only dimly aware of the applause as the boy returned, wearing his new badge. Then: Twenty-one. Twenty-two.

The numbers continued in order. Jonas sat, dazed, as they moved into the Thirties and then the Forties, nearing the end. Each time, at each announcement, his heart jumped for a moment, and he thought wild thoughts. Perhaps now she would call his name. Could he have forgotten his own number? No. He had always been Nineteen. He was sitting in the seat marked Nineteen.

But she had skipped him.

1 Understand the moment

1. What is Jonas preparing to do? Which actions show that he expects his turn?

2. What happens instead, and how does it interrupt his intended action?

3. How do his feelings change? Does he stop hoping that his name will be called?

THINK BEFORE THE RULE

Discover the pattern

Talk through each step and explain your choices to a partner.

2 Freeze the story

> “Perhaps now she would call his name.”

1. At the moment of this thought, has the Chief Elder called Jonas’s name?

2. Is being called before this thought, or still in Jonas’s future?

3. The story is told in the past. Which two words look forward from that past moment?

3 Compare an expectation and an intention

A. Jonas thought she would call his number next.

B. He was going to walk onto the stage, but she called Pierre.

These two sentences are classroom paraphrases based on the scene, not quotations from the novel.

1. Which sentence describes what Jonas believed would happen? Which describes what he intended to do?

2. In sentence B, which words tell us that his intended next action was interrupted?

3. What form of the verb follows would? What form follows was going to? Compare call with called, and walk with walking.

4 Say the rule before you check

Explain these patterns to your partner. Choose the words that fit.

Time: From a past point of view, these expressions look forward / backward.

Expectation: would + V1 / past form / -ing form

Intention: was / were going to + V1 / past form / -ing form

Then turn the page to check your discovery and revisit the scene through the cartoons.

CHECK, THEN EXPLAIN

Return to Jonas

Compare your discovery with the rule. Then use it to explain the cartoon sequence.

Future in the Past: we look forward from an earlier moment.
would + V1 can report an earlier expectation.
was / were going to + V1 can describe an earlier intention.

The form alone does not tell us whether the later action happened. Here, the rest of the story shows that Jonas's intended next action was interrupted.

Look at panels 1–3. Explain what Jonas expected, what interrupted his intention, and what he still hoped would happen.

Panel 4: an imagined conversation

Fiona: What did you think would happen?
Jonas: I thought she would call my number. I was going to walk onto the stage, but she called Pierre.

The illustrations and conversation are classroom adaptations. This exchange does not appear in the novel.

FROM THE NOVEL TO EVERYDAY SITUATIONS

Expectations and intentions

V1 is the form in call, buy and rain. Play each linked cartoon, then explain why its form fits.

1 An earlier expectation

Jonas thought his number would be called. At the fair, Rüzgâr also explains what he expected before an event.

Eylül: Why did you bring extra money to the fair?
Rüzgâr: I thought the snacks would be expensive.
Eylül: So you expected higher prices before you arrived.

Notice: I thought the snacks would be expensive.

Meaning: His thought about prices came first. Buying snacks was still ahead from that earlier point of view.

Form: would + V1

Think: Which happened first: his expectation about prices or his visit to the fair?

Use it aloud: Explain something you expected before a school event: “I thought … would …”.

2 An earlier intention

Jonas was preparing to walk onto the stage. Now compare that interrupted intention with a shopping plan that changed.

Ceren: Did you buy new headphones?
Baran: No. I was going to buy them, but I repaired my old pair.
Ceren: So your plan changed.

Notice: I was going to buy them, but I repaired my old pair.

Meaning: Buying headphones was Baran’s earlier intention. The words after “but” explain what he did instead.

Form: was / were going to + V1

Think: Did Baran buy the new headphones? Which words show the outcome?

Use it aloud: Tell your partner about a real or invented plan that changed: “I was going to …, but …”.

EXTEND THE IDEA

Predictions and arrangements

Look forward from an earlier moment. Decide whether the speaker predicts an event or describes an agreed plan.

3 A prediction made earlier

The same form can describe a prediction. Compare an intention to buy something with expecting rain from dark clouds.

Derin: Why did you take an umbrella yesterday?
Kuzey: The sky was dark. I thought it was going to rain.
Derin: So you expected rain before you left.

Notice: I thought it was going to rain.

Meaning: Kuzey saw dark clouds and predicted rain. He was not planning to make it rain. His prediction was made before he left home.

Form: was / were going to + V1

Think: What evidence supported his prediction? Does this dialogue tell us whether it actually rained?

Use it aloud: Explain why you took a coat or umbrella one day: “I thought it was going to …, so I …”.

4 An arrangement viewed from the past

An intention is one kind of future plan. A meeting already agreed with another person is an arrangement. Rewind to Monday and look ahead to Friday.

Yasmin: Why were you so busy last Monday?
Toprak: We were meeting the charity organiser on Friday, so we had to prepare.
Yasmin: The meeting was already arranged, then.

Notice: We were meeting the charity organiser on Friday.

Meaning: From the point of view of Monday, the agreed Friday meeting was still in the future. The time clues make the arrangement clear.

Form: was / were + V-ing

Think: Had Friday happened yet on Monday? Was “meeting” an action in progress on Monday or an arrangement for later?

Use it aloud: Look back at Monday and explain a Friday arrangement: “We were meeting … on Friday, so …”.

COMPLETE THE CONNECTION

Responsibilities and meaning

Finish with what someone was expected to do. Then compare all five meanings.

5 An earlier responsibility

A plan tells us what someone intended to do. A responsibility tells us what was expected of them. Compare “going to help” with “supposed to help”.

Ela: Why was the teacher looking for our team?
Tuna: We were supposed to set up the tables before lunch, but we were late.
Ela: So that was our job.

Notice: We were supposed to set up the tables before lunch.

Meaning: Setting up the tables before lunch was the team’s agreed responsibility. The rest of the sentence explains that they were late.

Form: was / were supposed to + V1

Think: Does “supposed to” describe what the team wanted, or the job expected of them? What went wrong?

Use it aloud: Describe an agreed job and what actually happened: “We were supposed to …, but …”.

6 Compare before you choose

Earlier expectation: would + V1

Earlier intention: was / were going to + V1

Earlier prediction: was / were going to + V1

Later arrangement in a past story: was / were + V-ing

Earlier responsibility: was / were supposed to + V1

Return to Jonas: explain his expectation and interrupted intention using two different forms. Then choose one of the other scenes and explain how its meaning is different.

Keep the outcome separate: these forms look forward from a past moment. Use the rest of the story to work out what actually happened.
